Chicago, Ill.- The UIC men's basketball team puts its sparkling home record on the line for the second time in three days in a pivotal Horizon League clash against Youngstown State at the UIC Pavilion this Saturday night.

The Flames (11-10, 5-5 Horizon League) and the Penguins (7-14, 3-8 Horizon League) will begin their battle at 7:00 p.m.

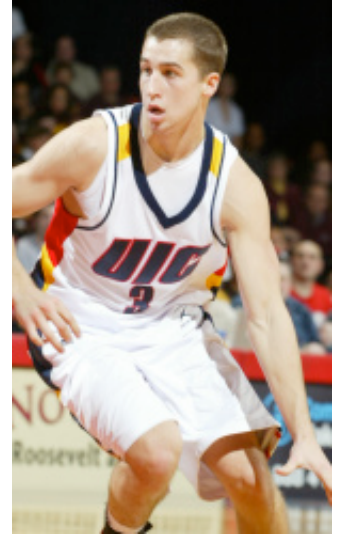

Adam Levinson and Kenny McReynolds will call the action live on WIND 560 AM.

After a 74-68 win over Cleveland State this past Thursday, the Flames improved to 9-1 at home this season. UIC has been victorious in 12 of its last 13 contests at the Pavilion dating back to last season.

While the Penguins come to Chicago amidst an abundance of wintry weather, usually they have not found the Windy City to be an inviting environment. UIC is a perfect 8-0 at home against Youngstown State.

Junior sharpshooter Josh Mayo is coming off a 29-point performance against the Vikings this past Thursday. Mayo upped his Division I-leading three-point field goal percentage to 54.5 percent after going 4-for-5 from beyond the arc against Cleveland State.
